What it does:

A recruiting firm providing large hospital systems with staffers ranging from physicians to nurses to allied health professionals.

Why it's growing:

CEO Veronica Edwards says the medical staffing business is thriving due to a shortage of medical professionals who are needed to supplement an aging U.S. population. "The demand is high, but there is only a small group of companies that know how to recruit and keep those professionals," says Edwards.

What's noteworthy:

The company landed contracts with Mayo Clinic, the Department of Veterans Affairs and the University of Texas.
